U.S. POLICY FAILS, SO CIA CHIEF OUT

STATINTL

Sofia ZEMEDEL'SKO ZNAME 3 August 1961--A

(Unattributed article: "Inglorious End of a Disgraceful Career")

(Text) The chief of the Central Intelligence Agency of the United States, Allen Dulles, has resigned, but, as the White House explains, he is supposed to continue to exercise his functions until the end of this year. Thus the man whose name was linked to all the recent international provocations and military adventures of the United States against other countries is disappearing from the scene.

Dulles started his career as a spy as early as World War I, in the guise of a U.S. diplomat in Vienna and Bern. Between the two world wars the experienced diversionist was the chief of the Near East section of the State Department. At the beginning of World War II, however, he was again in Bern as an agent of the U.S. intelligence service in Europe. In Bern Dulles recruited as agents a number of Ribbentrop's most trusted people, as well as the chief of the Hitlerite intelligence service, Canaris. Upon his advice the entire network of the former Nazi spies went over to the service of the Gehlen department in West Germany after the defeat of Hitlerism. This department practically became an appendage of the U.S. intelligence service.

Allen Dulles "expanded" his efforts in 1953 when Eisenhower appointed him Chief of the Central Intelligence Agency of the United States. Under his leadership this "department of dirty tricks" was transformed into the most active promoter of the brink-of-war policy which was being propagated by Allen Dulles' brother, John Foster Dulles, and espionage was proclaimed as a state policy of the United States.

As soon as he assumed his functions, Allen Dulles guaranteed full support to the Kuomintang units that had passed over to Burma, and directed their banditlike actions against the CPR. In 1953 Dulles' agency organized the overthrow of Mossadeq in Iran and the following year the conspiracy against the Arbenz government in Guatemala.

Dulles devoted particular efforts to transforming West Berlin into a hotbed of espionage and diversions against the USSR and the other socialist countries. Who does not remember the system of tapping telephone conversations that was discovered in Berlin?

Was it not Dulles who "assured" the world that the launching of numerous balloons and leaflets, radio transmitters, and other equipment over the socialist countries was envisaged for meteorological research? Air spy Powers also set off for such research with the U-2 plane on 1 May 1960, a provocative flight that aborted the Paris summit meeting.

Everyone expected that the discredited Allen Dulles would go with Eisenhower, but he remained to serve the new president. The unsuccessful attempt to overthrow the legitimate government of Souvanna Phouma in Laos, however, and above all the failure of the aggression against Cuba, fully discredited Dulles and undermined even more the U.S. prestige in the eyes of all people.

This is why the White House decided to dismiss Dulles as a figure who had become inconvenient, and to replace him with somebody else. Dulles' forced resignation, however, means primarily that the United States admits the failure of its aggressive policy. Neither total espionage, nor provocations, nor subversive activity, however, can help imperialism any more. Those ruling circles in the United States who refuse to understand this fact and who still intend to continue this dangerous course in the future can only share the fate of Allen Dulles--absolute political failure.

CPSU DRAFT PROGRAM EMBODIES IDEALS

Sofia Domestic Service in Bulgarian 2030 GMT 8 August 1961--M

(Declaration of the Bulgarian Communist Party Central Committee on the CPSU Draft Program)

(Text) The glorious CPSU, the party of the great Lenin, published a draft program, a plan for the attainment of the centuries-long and innermost dream of mankind for the construction of communism. Boundless is the joy of all working people throughout the world. The dark forces of imperialism and reaction are embarrassed and embittered.

The CPSU draft program is the most remarkable document of our epoch, a contemporary Communist Manifesto of worldwide significance. Based on the main principles of the life-giving Marxist-Leninist teaching, the experience derived from the construction of socialism in the Soviet Union and in all other countries of the world socialist system, from the victories of the world communist and workers movement, this draft program like a mighty torch illuminates mankind's path to one of its greatest victories--the victory of communism.
